Hi, I’m Sofia Mendes. I’m a project coordinator at a company that develops software for small businesses. I work with our developers and our clients to make sure everyone knows what needs to be done and when. At the moment, I’m helping a chain of cafés set up a new system for tracking stock. Before moving into project coordination, I worked in customer support, so I know how confusing new software can be at first. I’m here today to meet other people who work with small businesses and hear how they help their clients get started with new tools. What kind of work do you do?
